India, August 12, 2025: Royal Enfield, the global leader in the mid-size motorcycle segment, has launched a new colourway for the 2025 Hunter 350 - Graphite Grey. This addition elevates the mid variant to three distinctive hues, complementing the existing Rio White and Dapper Grey, and bringing the Hunter 350's total colour options to seven.

Inspired by the unadulterated energy of the streets, the 2025 Hunter 350's new Graphite Grey is designed for riders who treat the city as their playground, ride with quiet confidence, and favour understated style with a bold attitude. Its matt finish and streamlined form offer a modern yet minimalistic presence - an ideal match for those who appreciate subtlety with an edge. The motorcycle is further complemented by neon yellow accents across the machine, inspired by street graffiti art.

Following a comprehensive upgrade earlier this year, which introduced three new street-inspired colours along with key mechanical and ergonomic enhancements, this latest colourway further diversifies the aesthetic appeal of the Hunter 350 nameplate.

The 2025 Hunter 350 is powered by Royal Enfield's dynamic 349cc J-series engine, renowned for its spirited performance and reliability. With its streamlined silhouette and signature blend of retro cues and modern styling, the Hunter 350 is perfectly suited to weaving through traffic or relaxing at urban hotspots.

2025 HUNTER 350 NEW COLORS AND FEATURES:

- From the white sands of Rio to the red brick lanes of London and the black asphalt streets of Tokyo, the all-new colourways of the 2025 Hunter 350 - Rio White, Tokyo Black, and London Red - are inspired by the coolest zip codes around the world. Adding to this exciting line-up, Royal Enfield now has the Graphite Grey, a darker evolution of the Hunter which blends in stealth styling with bold pops of attitude.
- Increased ground clearance, improved seat comfort, new suspension and an intuitive ergonomic triangle that syncs with the rider perfectly, enhancing riding comfort.
- 2025 Hunter 350 is the first 350-cc motorcycle from Royal Enfield to get a slip-assist clutch.

- LED headlamps, tripper pod and type-C USB fast charging for an improved rider experience.

Since its initial launch, the Hunter 350 has garnered a devoted global rider community exceeding half a million, making it one of the fastest-growing models for Royal Enfield. The new Graphite Grey variant is poised to strengthen this community by appealing to riders seeking a personalized style statement without compromising its retro appeal and riding comfort.
